MONMOUTH, Ill. -- Monmouth College has experienced one of the largest jumps in the respected “Washington Monthly’s College Guide and Rankings.”

The liberal arts college moved 82 spots to No. 77 in the magazine’s “National Universities – Liberal Arts” category. The magazine ranked 239 liberal arts colleges and universities in its latest issue.

“This is an important recognition of Monmouth College’s academic and co-curricular excellence,” said Monmouth College President Dr. Clarence R. Wyatt. “This national honor is also a testament to the extraordinarily talented faculty and staff who work every day to make Monmouth a place where the liberating arts empower students to change lives and make a difference in the world.”
