

Anthony LoBello
Advancement Committee

Anthony LoBello has been contributing to higher education architecture in the state Illinois since the beginning of his career with one of his very first professional projects in the 1990s. He realized that these are "his people." Since then he has built a deep knowledge and network within the higher education fabric of the Midwest. Having contributed to the sponsorship efforts of the American Institute of Architects (AIA), Chicago Architecture Center (CAC) and the Society of College and University Planners (SCUP) as sponsorship chair, he is uniquely qualified in the role of Advancement chair.

Tony is director of business development and higher education thought leaders for Sheehan Nagle Hartray Architects, Chicago. His architectural design leadership has contributed to the fabric of many institutions with new buildings, renovations and master planning. The most space and energy efficient decisions and process will make the built environment of the universities an asset rather than a liability. He is dedicated to the betterment and exposure of the amazing liberal arts intuitions within the state. He is honored serve ACI in this and other pursuits.
